Sometimes even good people make bad decisions when it comes to affairs of the heart.

Blair is an optimistic good girl, turned jaded wife. After ten years of a disappointing marriage, she decides to reclaim her happiness and fill the void left by her wealthy, philandering husband. Just when everything she's ever dreamed of is finally within her grasp, she's haunted by her past, forcing her to make a decision which will forever change the path of her life.

Jonathan is a do-gooding college basketball coach in a relationship with a woman whose Park Avenue upbringing is at constant odds with his Main Street way of life. It's a life he's conceded to accept until he meets a woman who awakens in him everything he's been missing and is now uncertain he can live without.

Elle is a NYC editor whose type-A personality has afforded her a fulfilling lifestyle in which she rarely doesn't get what she wants. That's until a failed relationship causes her walls to come crashing down around her. The man, who everyone agreed was her perfect other half, leaves her confused, insecure and incapable of moving on, even after she meets someone who's nothing like her, but who completes her in the strangest of ways.

Living in Glass Houses is a contemporary story of three friends, all at a crossroads after discovering that sometimes even the best laid plans won't result in the life you want. It's about navigating the murky waters of relationships and friendships and having the courage to make those hard, life-altering decisions which mark the difference between existing and living.

So what these guides have than the others?

John Fouts:

As a student exactly feel bored to be able to reading. If their teacher questioned them to go to the library or make summary for some e-book, they are complained. Just small students that has reading's soul or real their pastime. They just do what the trainer want, like asked to go to the library. They go to presently there but nothing reading critically. Any students feel that studying is not important, boring in addition to can't see colorful pictures on there. Yeah, it is being complicated. Book is very important for you personally. As we know that on this period of time, many ways to get whatever we really wish for. Likewise word says, many ways to reach Chinese's country. Therefore this Living in Glass Houses can make you really feel more interested to read.
