The County T. A. Novak

Patrolman Jake Bush's move from Detroit to the Oakland County Sheriff's Department was to allay his wife's fears about being married to a cop while continuing to do the type of work he lived for—locking up criminals. He thought he'd leave behind the dangers of working the inner-city for the imagined slower pace of a county deputy. Little did he know as he was suddenly confronted with crimes like a series of murders and child kidnappings that not only touched his life, but the lives of those he loved.
